Was the dream light or dark in mood? Was it about the revealed personality or the the hidden shadow side? Did it facilitate or challenge? Was it one of those dreams that leaves you wanting more because of what it gave to you, or is it one of those dreams that you are kinda glad is over because of what it took from you? Was it ordinary and nice or or strange and spooky? Was the dream describing literal experiences, or things never imagined? Was it one of those dreams that seems all too real, where people and things behave much as they would in waking life, or was is one of those dreams where everything and everyone is an ever-shifting morphic hybrid of influences? Was the dream, in general, more masculine or more feminine? Was there an abundance of phallic or vulvic imagery? Was the dream provocative or evocative? Was the dreamer the seducer or was the dreamer seduced? Was the dream presenting the agent of a cause or the result of an effect? Did the dream include involved participation or remote observation? Was it more about being an extrospective participator, or an introspective observer? Did the dream take place inside or outside? Was the dream busy or calm? Was something happening, or was it more about the space between happenings? Was the dreamer moving within the dream, or was the dream moving around the dreamer? If these questions can be honestly and accurately answered, this Dream Analysis Calculator will lead to a Quintagram with important information about the archetypal influences that are shaping the dream in question. Print out this chart. Put a circle around each solid or open line that goes with each answer chosen. Put those lines together, from left to right, to create a Quintagram.
